COMBAT! Patrol

Point Man's latest comic concept - Yes, another ripoff of someone else's idea (but in 1/6th)...

It has been several years since I have done a WWII comic series. Those of you who were in the hobby back then might remember JEB SAVAGE and the HAUNTED M5, which was a retelling of the DC Comic's classic - The Haunted Tank. Since then I have done a number of other comic projects, but have never really returned to WWII as a comic subject. I am now looking at the idea of a new comic based on the old TV series - COMBAT! My characters don't look anything like the TV actors, nor are the names of the characters the same. In my story we have Lt. Handy, Sgt. Sanders, Corby, Gage, Doc and Uncle John, but the idea is the same. Each episode features the squad on patrol, kind of like the TV show. Look for it down the road. - PM.

A look at the JULY CLUB MEETING

The July meeting was a great event with plenty of eye candy for all. Amaral brought a table full of his beautifully put together and weathered figures for all of us to drool over and Panzercommander had his wonderful M20 armored car for additional drooling. Dr. Zorkon had a nice selection of eye candy as well. Including a very cool diorama featuring WWII pilots and a Quonset hut which was representing air field action on December 7th. That hut is made out of cardboard! Can you believe it? Very cool indeed. The good Doctor also had a nicely done mounted General Lee and a cool diorama on a motorized carousel featuring a variety of vampires and vampire hunters. Featured on the next page is a picture of Abraham Lincoln, Vampire Hunter driving a stake through the heart of a nasty vampire. There was a lot of action on this dio and one could easily do an entire feature article on it. Trooper Tim had the coolest robot fighting machine made from a variety of items, including the flight deck of a Barbie Jet. This was easily the most imaginative item of the evening. He did a beautiful job on this thing and even all of us WWII hobbies all agree that it is very, very cool. Paul put together a neat little rail car done in an Ohio State color scheme, also very imaginative and a nice slice of something different. It was all around a great night.

TOYCHEST AND COLLECTIBLES

TOYCHEST AND COLLECTIBLES PURCHASED BY SSCC MEMBER, GRAY GHOST!

Toychest and Collectibles is under new management and the new owner is one of the SSCC's own, member, Gray Ghost. Gray Ghost purchased the online company from previous owner, Cory Lord back in May and moved the company from Georgia to Ohio. New owner Gray Ghost has been working hard to get his hands around the operation and it is this writer's humble opinion that folks will see some improvements in the way things are run over the next few months. Already TC&C has taken a more aggressive stance in the way they use email sales flyers and we should soon see some improvements to the website as well. Those of us in the SSCC are excited to have a major vendor as part of our club. Congratulations to Gray Ghost.
